

I am writing in support of Indiana's telephone privacy law. By asking to be placed on a "no-call" list, I am requesting that commercial interests not disturb the peace of my home. The Indiana law functions to forward that request to commercial interests such as banks and phone companies. Why should their interest in marketing overrule my stated request that they not disturb me at home?

Thank you for your time.